Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 09 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Sunny spells and scattered showers.

Today:
Any early rain will soon clear to leave sunny spells and the odd shower through the day. It will remain breezy, especially towards the west coast. Feeling pleasant in the sunshine. Maximum temperature 17 deg C (63 deg F).

Tonight:
A largely dry evening with a few showers still lingering in the north. Some clear spells developing overnight but remaining breezy near the coast. Minimum temperature 4 deg C (39 deg F).

Monday:
A windy day with frequent showers, some of these turning heavy and thundery in places. Showers will ease by the evening. Temperatures near to average. Maximum temperature 16 deg C (61 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Nights become milder but remaining rather unsettled with patchy cloud, sunny spells and showers or longer spells of rain throughout. Daytime temperatures returning to near average.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.